

A) The Woodland Caribou, Rangifer tarandus, primarily occurs in North America and extends from Alaska to the northern United States and across all jurisdictions in Canada except Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, and Nunavut (Edmonds 1991, Thomas & Gray 2002). Individuals of the Northern Caribou, Rangifer tarandus caribou, have been equipped with tracking collars to monitor their spatial distribution and recovery in British Columbia, Canada. The subspecies occurs in the mountainous and low-land plateau areas of west-central and northern British Columbia and has distinct horizontal as well as vertical change in location when migrating (Heard & Vagt 1998).